Wild Animals I Have Known

By Ernest Thompson Seton

These stories are true. Although I have left the strict line of historical truth in many places, the animals in this book were all real characters. They lived the lives I have depicted, and showed the stamp of heroism and personality more strongly by far than it has been in the power of my pen to tell.

I believe that natural history has lost much by the vague general treatment that is so common. What satisfaction would be derived from a ten-page sketch of the habits and customs of Man? How much more profitable it would be to devote that space to the life of some one great man. This is the principle I have endeavored to apply to my animals. The real personality of the individual, and his view of life are my theme, rather than the ways of the race in general, as viewed by a casual and hostile human eye.

This may sound inconsistent in view of my having pieced together some of the characters, but that was made necessary by the fragmentary nature of the records. There is, however, almost no deviation from the truth in Lobo, Bingo, and the Mustang.

Lobo lived his wild romantic life from 1889 to 1894 in the Currumpaw region, as the ranchmen know too well, and died, precisely as related, on January 31, 1894.

Bingo was my dog from 1882 to 1888, in spite of interruptions, caused by lengthy visits to New York, as my Manitoban friends will remember. And my old friend, the owner of Tan, will learn from these pages how his dog really died.

The Mustang lived not far from Lobo in the early nineties. The story is given strictly as

Fait Accompli: Agentive Tech Is Here

A note from the editors: We're pleased to share an excerpt from Chapter 2 of Chris Noessel's new book, Designing Agentive Technology, AI That Works for People, available now from Rosenfeld Media. For a limited time, ALA readers can get 20% off Chris's book by using the code 'ALADAT' on the Rosenfeld Media site.

Similar to intelligence, agency can be thought of as a spectrum. Some things are more agentive than others. Is a hammer agentive? No. I mean if you want to be indulgently philosophical, you could propose that the metal head is acting on the nail per request by the rich gestural command the user provides to the handle. But the fact that it's always available to the user's hand during the task means it's a tool—that is, part of the user's attention and ongoing effort.

Toptal - Toptal matches you with top developers who are guaranteed to succeed.

AD

Less philosophically, is an internet search an example of an agent? Certainly the user states a need, and the software rummages through its internal model of the internet to retrieve likely matches. This direct cause-and-effect means that it's more like the hammer with its practically instantaneous cause-and-effect. Still a tool.

But as you saw before, when Google lets you save that search, such that it sits out there, letting you pay attention to other things, and lets you know when new results come in,

Inspired by our region, seasons & community

The idea of "Market Cuisine" stems from the French Canadian term "Cuisine du Marché," which means cooking with fresh ingredients. At MARKET, our fresh ingredient philosophy starts in our kitchen, where we bake our own breads daily, cure our own meats, do our own butchering, make our own cheese and grow our own herbs, micro greens and select vegetables. MARKET is the first restaurant in Calgary to use an internal home garden, the Urban Cultivator, where we can grow more than 16 different varieties of heirloom seeds year round. We change our menu regularly so we can cook in harmony with the changing seasons and ensure the freshest and best tasting ingredients possible.

I believe that natural history has lost much by the vague general treatment that is so common. What satisfaction would be derived from a ten-page sketch of the habits and customs of Man? Bingo was my dog from 1882 to 1888, in spite of interruptions, caused by lengthy visits to New York, as my Manitoban friends will remember. And my old friend, the owner of Tan, will learn from these pages how his dog really died.

The Mustang lived not far from Lobo in the early nineties. The story is given strictly as it occurred, excepting that there is a dispute as to the manner of his death. According to some testimony he broke his neck in the corral that he was first taken to. Old Turkeytrack is where he cannot be consulted to settle it.

Wully is, in a sense, a compound of two dogs; both were mongrels, of some collie blood, and were raised as sheep-dogs. The first part of Wully is given as it happened, after that it was known only that he became a savage, treacherous sheep-killer. The details of the second part belong really to another, a similar yaller dog, who long lived the double-life—a faithful sheep-dog by day, and a bloodthirsty, treacherous monster by night. Such things are less rare than is supposed, and since writing these stories I have heard of another double-lived sheep-dog

Hello, Black Mirror-ish version of yourself. Welcome to your new job!

Many are nervous during their first day at work, but don't worry. It's easy, and with minimal effort you will excel at your new career.

You've obviously found your workstation. Your job is to sit here and wait for a badge or notification to appear. When it does, you'll hear a beep or a ding, letting you know that it's time to get to work. Quickly type whatever message, accept whatever invite, or install whatever update that is required to make the badge or notification disappear. That's it.

I tried and abandoned Inventor's Outlook in Freeport, Gnomeland Security in Steamfont, the Drednever Crash Site in The Bonemire and Dropship Landing Zone in The Moors of Ykesha. At some point, one of these 'expert analysts' is going to mention that, perhaps, in order to make money in the gaming sector, you might want to try making a good game, right? Now, there's a very lore-centric reason that Turbine chose to exclude female dwarves, and it's not that they don't exist. I check the GTN each time I play before I start gaming for realsies, and again before I log for the night.

Redesigning the Country Selector

Turning standard drop-downs into advanced auto-complete fields

During our recent checkout study we found several usability issues when using a drop-down for your country selector: a lack of overview, unclear sorting, scrolling issues, inconsistent UIs, a lack of context on mobile devices, and finally, they break the user's tab-flow.

So we took it upon ourselves to redesign the country selector.

DEMO

Using principles of progressive enhancement we turn a standard drop-down into an advanced auto-complete field. This means the drop-down remains accessible, while providing a much better experience in modern browsers – handling typos, multiple spelling sequences, synonyms and prioritization.

You can read more about the design process and usability aspects in our article on Smashing Magazine: Redesigning the Country Selector.

To be notified about future improvements, follow the project on GitHub.

The image shows a woman sitting at a wooden dining table in a kitchen, eating from a bowl. A laptop is open on the table in front of her. The background features a window with a view of greenery and a potted plant. Overlaid on the bottom half of the image is a white rectangular form, likely a screenshot of a PayPal sign-up page. At the top of this form, there are four small circular progress indicators, with the first one filled dark blue. Below them is the text: "See for yourself why millions of people love PayPal – Sign up for free". Underneath this, the heading "Personal Account" is displayed in bold. A subtext below it reads: "Shop online or send and receive money. All without sharing your payment info." The form contains three input fields: "Your email", "Create your password", and "Confirm your password", each enclosed in a light gray box. At the bottom right of the form is a large blue button with the word "Next" in white. At the very bottom of the image, there is a dark footer bar containing links: "© 2016 PayPal", "Privacy", "Legal", "Contact", "Feedback", and a small American flag icon.

We have worked in the industry for 15 years and have provided services to a wide range of clients.

Come and see what our clients are saying about our services.

Johnathon Richard Smith
CEO / Manager - Auto Incorporated

“ When I started using their service I was skeptical. They promised me a 300% return on my initial investment. However they came through on their word and now my business is flourishing.. ”

Joanna Hammerlton
Marketing Manager - Omega Creative

“ Our company first enlisted their services when we had a down-turn in sales and revenue. They outlined a series of steps we could take to improve our position and within a year we are making significant improvements.. ”

Mobile Emulators & Simulators: The Ultimate Guide

Like 695 people like this. Be the first of your friends.

The most useful tools for mobile web are emulators and simulators. In Chapter 4 of Programming the Mobile Web I've made an extensive description and installation guideline for creating a desktop mobile testing environment. And in Chapter 13, I've also reviewed other solutions for mobile testing, including four device remote lab solutions.

I've mixed all this information to create this ultimate guide to 37 download resources for hundreds of emulators and simulators. Enjoy!

This list includes content from Programming the Mobile Web book with frequent updated information & links.

VoiceOver for OS X. A feature that speaks for itself.

VoiceOver doesn't just tell you what's happening, it helps you make things happen. It tells you what's on your screen, and walks you through actions like selecting a menu option or activating a button using your keyboard or trackpad. VoiceOver gives you complete control of your Mac, with no need to see the screen. And it's already built in.
